RESEARCH

I am currently researching the implications of migration to Georgia of a community of peasants from the State of Querétaro, Mexico. In the last decade, these peasants were forced to relocate when the construction of a major World Bank-funded hydroelectric project, a product of the North America Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), destroyed their communities in the early 1990's. I am exploring the impact of the loss of their main source of work, their land, and the subsequent loss of their cultural identity and how this impacts their environment, their economic well-being, their health status and their cultural traditions.

“The Affirmation of Cultural Identity: A Pilot Program with W.R. Coile Middle School Hispanic Students”. $4,700.00 Grant Research Proposal supported by Hispanic Scholarship Fund (HSF) and UGA University Alliance (Public Service and Outreach). October 29, 2008 to May 31, 2009.

“The Political Ecology of Water in Querétaro, Mexico.” Joint project funded by the Center of Latin American and Caribbean Studies, Michigan State University, January 2001–2005.

"Monitoring the resettlement of the population resulting from the construction of the Zimapán Hydroelectric Project." Project funded jointly by the National Institute for Indigenous Affairs (Mexico), the Federal Commission of Electricity (Mexico) and the World Bank Fund, July 1990-2001.

“The Cultural and Environmental Impact of Development in Rancho Largo, Querétaro” Universidad Autónoma de Querétaro, December 1996-December 2000.

"Food and public health in the southeastern region of the Gulf of Mexico." Project under the direction of the Food Systems and Society Program and funded jointly by the Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana, the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development, the Planning and Development Commission of the State of Tabasco and the National Council of Science and Technology. Included fieldwork carried out to fulfill requirements for Ph.D. in Anthropology from Michigan State University, September 1985-July 1987.

"Padre Kino Research Project." A multidisciplinary research project investigating pioneer/missionary Padre Kino's life and work in Northwest Mexico and Southwest United States, including his impact on ethnic groups and social classes. Project funded by the Secretary of Agriculture and Hydraulic Resources, Government of Mexico, December 1985-May 1987.

"Petroleum pollution and its effects on the health of Mexican residents in the coastal regions." A comparative study of the health of residents of two fishing villages in the States of Tabasco and Veracruz, Mexico. Fieldwork carried out to fulfill requirements for the Masters Degree in Anthropology from Michigan State University, Summer 1981.

"Socio-anthropological research of a textile industry in Mexico City: the health of the textile workers." Research carried out under my direction for the Ministry of Labor and Social Security, Government of Mexico, 1979-1980.

"Peasant migration and the sugar mill of Calípam of the Valley of Tehuacán, Puebla, Mexico: the case of the sugar cane workers and their fountains of geographic, economic and social origin." Research funded by the Center for Advanced Research of the National Institute of Anthropology and History and under the direction of Dr. Scott Whiteford, professor of Michigan State University and researcher of C.I.S.I.N.A.H., 1977-1979.

"Mechanisms of domination in a sugar cane plantation: the case of Tlaquiltenango, Morelos (Mexico)." Research carried out to fulfill the requirements of the Licenciatura thesis directed by Dr. Peter Singelmann, professor of the University of Missouri and visiting professor and researcher of the Universidad Iberoamericana, 1975-1976.

"The social-economic situation of the workers of a sisal (henequén) plant farm near Ciudad Victoria, Tamaulipas, Mexico." Field study carried out to fulfill requirements for the Licenciatura degree at the Universidad Iberoamericana, Summer 1974.

"The system of "mayordomias" and the economy in San Jerónimo Amanalco, State of Mexico." Field study carried out to fulfill requirements for the Licenciatura degree at the Universidad Iberoamericana, Summer 1973.

"Social Organization in Cuitareo, Michoacán, Mexico." Field study carried out to fulfill requirements for the Licenciatura degree at the Universidad Iberoamericana, Summer 1972.
